

Learning French

There's no getting away from the fact that in general, the British are not very good at learning other languages. Perhaps this is for cultural or historical reasons, perhaps it's just that we don't have the ear for it. However, in order to enjoy living in France, it is pretty much essential to at least learn some basic French as soon as possible. It's true what they say - the older you get, the harder it becomes! Below are some ideas about how you can set about the process of learning French. Different things work for different people, so you may have to try a variety of methods before you find what works best for you.

Language Tapes:

There are many really good language tape sets that you may try. Most guide you from very basic language skills through to far more complex grammar and speech, so you needn't feel that they will be too difficult to get to grips with, nor too simple if you already have a grounding in French.

To read the rest of this Fact Sheet, please download the whole document